SENIORS AND THE LAW

A GUIDE FOR MATURING CALIFORNIANS

You have reached your “golden years.” Or your parents have reached theirs. You have a lot of company. With nearly 4.5 million residents age 65 or older, California has more seniors than any other state in the nation. Their numbers keep growing, as are their legal rights and the many programs geared to them.

When you become a senior, you will face new challenges. Will you have enough money to make ends meet? Will you become ill or incapacitated? Will you be able to get around if you cannot drive? Will you wind up helpless and alone—or even abused? You may become a target in a wide range of consumer scams as well, from home repair offers to Internet schemes to living trust “mills.” Slick con artists set their sights on seniors.

At no other time in your life has it been more important to plan ahead—and know your rights. You may not be aware of the many laws, benefits and special services available to help you stay in charge of your life. “Seniors and the Law” touches on some of them and provides contact information for numerous resources. Keep in mind that this guide is intended to provide you with general information. Laws are subject to change. If you have a specific legal problem, you may want to consult an attorney.

MAKING ENDS MEET

You may be tapping into retirement benefits for the first time. You may be house-rich, but cash-poor. Or you may be struggling just to pay your bills in the recent economic downturn. How you make ends meet will depend on your particular circumstances. But in your senior years, it will likely involve new types of income—Social Security, Supplemental Security Income, a pension or maybe a retirement account distribution.

What is Social Security?

It is a government program that provides regular benefits to eligible workers and their families after the worker retires, becomes severely disabled or dies. Social Security taxes from employees, employers and self-employed workers help fund the program. If you have paid into the program long enough—roughly 10 years—you will be eligible for full benefits sometime between the ages of 65 and 67 (depending on your date of birth). What you receive will be based on your past earnings. You may qualify for reduced benefits at age 62. But such benefits, if taken at that age, will remain at that lower level permanently.

You can put off collecting any benefits until age 70. You will receive delayed retirement credit and wind up with a larger monthly check—as much as 8 percent more for each year beyond your retirement age. To find out how employment income might affect your benefits, see the section entitled Staying on the Job. And for information on the potential impact of your marital status, see Getting Divorced or Remarried.

Traveling or living in most foreign countries will not affect your eligibility for benefits. However, you should contact Social Security if you plan to leave the country for 30 days or longer.

To check your earnings and benefit status, call 800-772-1213 (www.socialsecurity.gov) for a free personal statement from the Social Security Administration. To find out what other types of benefits might be available to you, you can also check the National Council on Aging’s “benefits checkup” website (www.benefitscheckup.org).

What is a representative payee?

A representative payee is someone who is authorized to receive your Social Security or Supplemental Security Income checks for you. If you have trouble managing your checks, for example, the Social Security Administration might appoint a relative, friend or qualified organization to receive the payments for you. (A power of attorney is not sufficient for cashing such checks.) By law, a representative payee must keep records of how payments are received, spent or paid and can only spend the funds on your needs—they could be convicted of misusing funds if he or she were to do otherwise.

Veterans can contact the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs and railroad retirees can contact the Railroad Retirement Board about similar payee programs. (See Resources section.)

What is Supplemental Security Income (SSI)?

SSI is a cash assistance program for U.S. citizens and some non-citizens who are age 65 or older, blind or disabled. Only those with limited resources can qualify for monthly checks in an amount based on the individual’s circumstances. In California, the program is administered with additional funding from the State Supplemental Program (SSP). Even if you believe you will not qualify for more than a very small amount of SSI/SSP funding, it may be worth your while to apply for such assistance. As a recipient, you are automatically eligible for free health benefits under Medi-Cal. And you may receive other benefits, such as In-Home Supportive Services, as well. (WIC §§ 12000-12351) You can apply for SSI/SSP at your local Social Security Administration office.

What is a reverse mortgage?

A reverse mortgage allows you, if you are 62 or older, to receive cash advances based on the equity in your home. If you own your home but have little income, this type of loan may assist you in making ends meet. You generally will not have to pay anything back until you sell your home, transfer title, leave your home for an extended period, move out or die. Nor is there any prepayment penalty. You can never owe more than the value of your home. To obtain such a loan, you must use a licensed lender. In addition, you must get counseling regarding such loans before applying for one. (The lender is required to provide information on counseling agencies and cannot accept your application without a certificate showing you underwent counseling.) With so much at stake, you should make sure you understand the legal and financial consequences before you sign such a loan.

You can get more information on reverse mortgages and local non-profit counseling agencies by visiting the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) website at www.hud.gov.

Is there any special tax relief for seniors?

Yes, as a senior, you may be eligible to keep your property tax at the same level if you sell your home and buy another home that is worth the same or less. (See Choosing Where to Live.) The future of two other tax relief programs for seniors, however, remains in question. In 2008, funding for a homeowner and renter assistance program that partially reimbursed property tax payments to low-income seniors and the blind and disabled was cut from the state budget. For more information, contact the Franchise Tax Board. (See Resources.)

During a state budget crisis in 2009, legislation suspended a state property tax postponement program. However, in 2011, the state established a new program authorizing California counties to allow low-income seniors and disabled citizens to defer the payment of property tax on their homes or mobile homes until the sale of the property or the settlement of their estate. For updated information on the program's status, contact the State Controller's office (see Resources).

Homeowners of any age can file a homeowners property tax exemption with their county assessor's office to claim a tax exemption on $7,000 of the market value of their home. To be eligible, a homeowner must live in the home.

Can I get any help paying my gas and electric bills?

If you have very little income, you may qualify for California Alternate Rates for Energy (CARE). This program provides a 20 percent discount on electric and natural gas bills. (PUC § 739.1) For information and an application, contact your energy company.

What can I do if I can't afford to eat?

Find a local nutrition program, which are usually located in senior centers. You and your spouse can get free hot meals as long as one of you is age 60 or older. Your local nutrition program may also provide transportation. If you are homebound, you can have hot meals delivered to you. Your county's Area Agency on Aging can provide you with information on local nutrition sites (see Resources) and food banks. Counties also offer food stamp programs (CalFresh) to help cover grocery bills. If you are on SSI/SSP, however, you would not qualify for such assistance. For more information on eligibility, call 800-952-5253 (choose Public Social Services Programs from the automated selection) or go to the Department of Social Services website at www.dss.cahwnet.gov/foodstamps/ or call your local county social services or human services agency.

Is there any financial assistance available for seniors who are immigrants?

Yes. California's Cash Assistance Program for Immigrants (CAPI) is for seniors who meet all the criteria for SSI/SSP cash assistance but have been turned down because of their immigration status. Such seniors may be able to get almost the same amount of cash as they would have received through SSI/SSP.

If the senior entered this country before Aug. 22, 1996, he or she is probably eligible for CAPI. If he or she did not get a green card until after that date, however, the situation is more complicated. If the senior arrived here more recently, there may be additional hurdles, depending on the senior's circumstances, sponsor and resources.

If you are a senior immigrant who is not eligible for CAPI, however, you may qualify for another type of assistance. If you have very little income, for example, you may be able to get help through General Assistance (GA) or General Relief (GR). If you are a recent refugee, you may be able to get Refugee Cash Assistance (RCA). If you are raising a grandchild or other young relative, you may qualify for another benefit. (See Raising Your Grandchildren.)

For more information on CAPI, GA/GR or RCA, contact your local human services agency or Area Agency on Aging.

CHOOSING WHERE TO LIVE

Most people prefer to remain self-sufficient for as long as possible. In your senior years, however, your circumstances—a change in your health or finances, for example—may call for a new living arrangement.

Can I get a tax break if I downsize to a smaller home?

Maybe. In some counties, if you are over age 55 (or severely or permanently disabled) and you sell your home to buy another home of the same or lesser value in the same county, your property tax will be calculated according to the base year value of your old home. In addition, some counties have ordinances allowing you to move from one county to the next—and still get the tax break. However, you will only get this property tax break once—unless you become disabled after receiving the tax relief based on your age. (RTC § 69.5)

Also, regardless of your age, you can sell your home for up to $250,000 in tax-free profit without owing capital gains tax—if you have owned and lived in your home for two years during the five years prior to the sale. If you are married and file a joint return, you would generally be allowed up to $500,000 in tax-free gain from the sale of your home. (Internal Revenue Service (IRS), Pub. 523)

Can a landlord turn me down as a tenant because I am a senior?

No. It is illegal for landlords to discriminate against anyone simply because he or she is 62 years old or older. Nor is it legal to discriminate

DISCOUNTS TRAVEL AND RECREATION

Your advancing years could result in some savings. As a senior—sometimes as young as 50—you can now travel, eat out, go to the movies and even visit national monuments at a cut-rate price. Just ask for the senior discount and, in many cases, you will get one.

If you are at least 62, you can get discounted rates for parking and camping facilities at CALIFORNIA STATE PARKS. The LIMITED USE GOLDEN BEAR SENIOR STATE PARKS PASS entitles you and a spouse or domestic partner free entry of one passenger vehicle during the non-peak season. (PRC § 5011) Passes are available for a $20 annual fee at any state park or district office. For information, call 800-777-0369.

At 62, you also qualify for an AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL-NATIONAL PARKS AND FEDERAL RECREATIONAL LANDS SENIOR PASS. This is a lifetime entrance permit (after a $10 processing fee) to national parks, monuments, recreation areas and national wildlife refuges. It also provides a 50 percent discount on the use of certain facilities and services. For information, call 888-GOPARKS (467-2757), or visit www.nps.gov. The pass can only be obtained in person at any national park, wildlife refuge or forest, as well as certain other federal offices.

Extra help to pay energy bills

- For low-income households of three or more persons who don't qualify for the California Alternate Rates for Energy (CARE), the Family Electric Rate Assistance (FERA) program can help with lower electrical rates.

- You may also qualify for medical equipment discount rates if you have special energy needs related to a medical condition.

- The Lifeline Rate Program is also available to low-income seniors or disabled customers.

- For information on Low Income and Assistance Programs, contact the California Public Utilities Commission at www.cpuc.ca.gov against a prospective home buyer based on his or her age. (California Fair Employment and Housing Act, CC § 51.2; GC § 12955(d))

Can my landlord evict me for any reason at all?

If you have a long-term lease, your landlord cannot evict you during the lease term unless you violate one of the lease provisions, such as failing to pay your rent. With a month-to-month lease, your landlord, in general, simply needs to give you 30 days' notice, or 60 days' notice if you've lived in the rental for more than a year. In most cities, your landlord does not have to give a reason for evicting you. (CC § 1946.1) There are, however, exceptions. For example, your landlord cannot evict you in retaliation for filing certain legal complaints. Nor can your landlord discriminate against you based on your age or various other personal characteristics. If you live in a mobile home park (CC § 798.55), it could be more difficult to evict you. In most cities with rent control ordinances, your landlord would have to have a "good cause" to evict you.

However, if you fail to pay rent, destroy or severely damage the property, use it for unlawful purposes (such as selling drugs), substantially interfere with the rights of other tenants or violate any other provision in the lease, you could receive a written notice to move out in three days. Landlords have been allowed since Jan. 1, 2012 to ban tobacco smoking under new leases and rental agreements. (CC § 1947.5)

Can I stop the eviction if it will leave me without a home?

The fact that an eviction will leave you homeless is not a legal defense. However, you cannot be kicked out of your home without a court order issued by a judge. Even then, only a sheriff's deputy or marshal can actually evict you. Your landlord cannot lock you out or shut off your utilities without going through a legal process. (CC § 789.3) For example, if you break your rental agreement by failing to pay your rent, your landlord could send you a three-day notice. If you did not violate your rental agreement, the landlord could send you a 30-day notice (or a 60-day notice for long-term tenants). Then, after the notice period is over, he or she could file an unlawful detainer seeking a court-ordered eviction. (CCP § 1161) A copy must be delivered to you. Then you would have five days to oppose the eviction by filing a written answer with the court. Seek legal help immediately. If you ignore an unlawful detainer, it could result in a default judgment authorizing immediate eviction.

If you cannot afford the fee for filing an answer, you can submit a form asking the court to waive it. If you have very little income and cannot afford an attorney, you may qualify for assistance from a local legal aid society. (See Getting Legal Help.)

Even if the court authorizes the eviction, you may have a last resort. You could file a petition for relief from forfeiture. If the eviction would be harder on you than your continued residence would be on the landlord, the judge may allow you to stay put if you are able to pay the rent. (CCP § 1179)

You also could ask the judge to postpone the eviction to give you time to prepare an appeal or to find somewhere else to live. Judges often grant such a request if you pay all of the rent up to your departure date. For more information, order a free copy of the State Bar pamphlet What Should I Know Before I Rent? (See Resources.)

Could I be evicted if my landlord loses my apartment in a foreclosure?

Maybe. But keep in mind that you have certain rights and protections in such a situation. If you have a lease, for example, federal law generally gives you the right to remain in your apartment until the end of that lease. The lease could only be terminated based on a foreclosure if the new owner plans to move into your apartment—and then you would be entitled to a 90-day written notice. If your lease is expiring or is a month-to-month agreement, you now must receive a 90-day notice to vacate before eviction proceedings can begin. Also, if your property was foreclosed on by either Freddie Mac or Fannie Mae, there are new opportunities for post-foreclosure rental agreements that could keep you in your home. If you live in a city with "just cause" protections, a foreclosure generally would not be reason enough to evict you—even after the expiration of any lease. For information on tenants rights call Tenants Together at 888-495-8020.

You have other rights as well. The new owner, for example, cannot change your locks without a court order or shut off your utilities. In light of a recent boom in real estate scams, you should verify the identity of anyone who approaches you claiming to be the new owner. For more information, go to www.foreclosureinfo.org.

Can I install grab bars, lower my countertops or make other needed modifications against my landlord's objections?

Yes. You have the legal right to do so if you have a disability and the modifications are necessary for your "full enjoyment of the premises." You may have to promise that you'll return the apartment to its original state when you move, but a landlord cannot prohibit such changes. If he or she does, you can file a complaint with the state Department of Fair Employment and Housing or HUD. For more information, call the Department of Consumer Affairs for a referral to a local tenants rights office or check the department's website for a list (see Resources). Consumer Affairs' online publication California Tenants: A Guide to Residential Tenants' and Landlords' Rights and Responsibilities may be helpful. To get a free copy by mail, call 866-320-8652 or send your request to: California Tenants, c/o Department of Consumer Affairs, Policy and Publications Development Office, 1625 N. Market Blvd., Suite N-112, Sacramento, CA 95834.

HOUSING OPTIONS

- If you need to cut costs or would like some company, consider shared housing. Go to www.nationalssharedhousing.org to find a directory listing California "match-up" and "group residence" programs. To find shared housing programs for low-income seniors, contact your county welfare department. (HSC §§ 19902-19904; WIC § 17000)
- Check out a senior citizen housing development, which is generally restricted to seniors age 55 and older. Such developments are specially tailored to seniors and may offer useful services. (CC § 51.3)
- If you need assistance in your day-to-day life, you might look into senior housing in which you pay a monthly fee for an apartment, communal meals, housekeeping and, in some cases, transportation. Some facilities offer help with personal care as well.
- Another option is an assisted living facility—a licensed residential care facility (RCFE) for seniors 60 and older—which provides supervision and home-like, non-medical services (such as a room, meals, laundry, transportation and some assistance with daily activities). Such facilities must be licensed. (HSC § 1569.10) All advertisements and correspondence must include the facility's license number. The license must be posted in a prominent place at the facility as well. (HSC §§ 1569.30, 1569.68, 1569.681) Such facilities are not licensed to care for anyone who is bedridden or who requires 24-hour nursing care.
- Continuing care communities are monitored and regulated by the state Department of Social Services (www.calccrc.ca.gov). They offer all levels of care. By contract, the provider promises to care for you as you age—sometimes for the rest of your life—in exchange for an entrance fee and/or periodic charges. Before signing any contract, seek financial and legal advice and carefully weigh the risks, benefits and costs. In addition, make sure that you understand exactly what the facility is promising to do for you. (HSC §§ 1770 et seq) Entrance fees can range from $10,000 to $500,000, with additional monthly fees of $2,000 or more.

To check the license of any facility that provides medical care, call the state Department of Public Health licensing and certification program at 800-236-9747. To verify the license of a facility that does not provide medical care, call a local or regional California Department of Social Services Community Care Licensing office or visit www.cclcd.ca.gov.

See Finding a Caregiver or Nursing Home for living arrangements involving greater assistance. For more information on your alternatives, you might contact the California Registry, which can provide you with a free list of assisted living, residential care or nursing home options based on your needs, budget and location. Check websites maintained by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the state Department of Public Health, the Administration on Aging and AARP. Your local Area Agency on Aging may also be able to assist you. (See Resources.)

The California Registry also provides a free list of assisted living, residential care or nursing homes. For more information visit www.calregistry.com or call 800-777-7575.

Can a younger person live with me in an age-restricted senior housing development?

It depends on your situation. Generally, the housing development's minimum age for residency (at least 55) would not apply to a spouse or cohabitant, a family member who is caring for you, a hired caregiver or a person who provides you with "primary physical or economic support." There are other exceptions as well. (CC § 51.3)

Can my landlord prohibit me from keeping a pet?

No, not if you are over 60 and live in rented housing owned or operated by the state, city or county. State law allows you to keep up to two pets. (HSC § 19901) Federal law also allows seniors and disabled people living in federally assisted rental units to keep pets. (This does not apply to private landlords.)

Also, if you live in a mobile home park, you cannot be charged a fee for keeping a pet unless the park actually provides special services or facilities for pets. (CC § 798.33)

If I need to be hospitalized for an extended period, can I rent out my mobile home?

Yes. If your doctor confirms (in writing) that you will be away from home for medical treatment, the mobile home park management must allow you to rent out your home or sublet the space for up to 12 months—as long as certain criteria are met. (CC § 798.23.5) For a copy of California's Mobilehome Residency Law, visit www.hcd.ca.gov (go to Quick Links, the Office of the Mobilehome Ombudsman) or call the Office of the Mobilehome Ombudsman at 800-952-5275.

OBTAINING

HEALTH CARE AND BENEFITS

How can I find out more about my various health care options?

Call California's Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program (HICAP) for counseling. HICAP is a network of community-based programs that provide free education, counseling and aid about Medicare and related health and prescription drug insurance coverage (call 800-434-0222). Additional resources include: Medicare, the California Department of Insurance and your local Area Agency on Aging. (See Resources.) If you have questions or complaints about your HMO, contact the state Department of Managed Health Care HMO Help Center at 888-466-2219 (www.hmohelp.ca.gov).

Can I get health insurance after my retirement?

You may be entitled, by law, to continued coverage under your employer's group health insurance plan for a short period of time. Some employers actually maintain health insurance for their retired employees. As a senior you have other options. Medicare, Medigap policies, health maintenance organizations (HMOs), Medi-Cal or veterans' benefits may help cover your medical expenses.

On March 23, 2010, the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act became law. It requires most people to have health insurance by 2014 and helps defray costs for those with moderate or low income. The act guarantees an annual wellness visit for people in traditional Medicare programs and requires preventive care such as flu shots, mammograms and cancer screenings. For information call the state's Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program at 800-434-0222 or go to www.medicare.gov.

What is Medicare?

Medicare is a federal health insurance program that covers Social Security recipients who are at least 65 years old or who are younger, but have disabilities such as kidney failure. Income level and assets have no bearing on an individual's eligibility for coverage.

Generally, Medicare participants may choose between the Original Medicare Plan, a Medicare Advantage Plan (sometimes called Part C—an HMO or PPO), a special needs plan, a private fee-for-service plan and, in some instances, other Medicare health plans that are only available in certain parts of the country. The participant pays the deductibles, co-payments and, in some cases, a monthly premium. Medicare then pays the rest of the tab for covered services.

The program has three components. Part A—referred to as hospital insurance—covers inpatient hospital care, some skilled nursing and home health care and hospice care. Part B—which in 2013 had a $104.90 to $335.70 monthly premium—helps pay for additional services. (It may cover physical and occupational therapy, for example, and some medically necessary home health care.) Part D launched in 2006 to provide prescription drug coverage. If you have very little income or currently receive certain other government benefits, you may qualify for greater help with your prescription drug bills.

Under Part D, all Medicare beneficiaries now qualify for prescription drug coverage. As a beneficiary, you can choose from a variety of Medicare-approved prescription drug plans. Keep in mind that these private insurance plans vary—in their premiums, deductibles, co-payments and lists of covered prescription drugs. You might choose to enroll in a Medicare Advantage Plan that covers physician and hospital care as well as prescription drugs. Before enrolling in any plan, make sure it meets your particular needs.

You may not need to enroll at all. You may already have a Medicare-approved prescription drug plan through Veterans Affairs or your employer, former employer, union or existing Medicare Advantage Plan. (If you are uncertain, contact your benefits advisor for guidance.) For more personalized assistance, go to Medicare's website, contact a Medicare representative or seek assistance from a HICAP counselor (see Resources).

What is Medigap?

It is supplemental health insurance that can help pay some of the expenses that are not covered by Original Medicare. For example, it may cover co-payments or some additional costs for a prolonged stay in a skilled nursing facility. Medigap does not, however, offer prescription drug coverage. Medicare handles such coverage. If you have a Medicare Advantage plan, you do not need Medigap. Under the new Affordable Care Act, you do not have to purchase a Medigap policy.

It is important to carefully consider your particular situation in deciding whether this supplemental insurance is worth the extra expense. Seek out the advice of a HICAP counselor or request a copy of Medicare's publication, Choosing a Medigap Policy: A Guide to Health Insurance for People with Medicare.

How is Medi-Cal different from Medicare?

Unlike Medicare, Medi-Cal is a health insurance program based on need. It pays for the health care of seniors who are at least 65 and who have very limited resources and income. (If you receive Supplemental Security Income, you automatically qualify for Medi-Cal benefits.) But even if you do not meet the strict financial need requirements, you could still qualify for Medi-Cal benefits if you are at least 65, blind or disabled, and have very little money or property. In such a case, however, you might have to pay a portion of your medical expenses yourself as a "share of the cost." Medi-Cal covers doctor visits, lab tests, prescription drugs and long-term care. For more information on Medi-Cal eligibility and benefits, call your local Area Agency on Aging or your county social services agency. For information, contact the Department of Managed Health Care at 800-430-4263.

As a veteran, am I entitled to additional health benefits?

Probably. You may be eligible for health care services at more than 50 medical centers and clinics throughout the state. Depending on your household income and net worth, you may pay just $15 to see a primary care doctor and $50 to see a specialist. Your medicine could cost no more than $8 per prescription and you may be entitled to dental care. For information, call the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (see Resources) or the California Office of Patient Advocates at 800-430-4263.

Do I need long-term care insurance?

It depends on your health, resources and arrangements for future care. There may come a time when you need daily or round-the-clock help with bathing, dressing and preparing meals. Such care can create serious financial strain on you and your loved ones. Medicare covers nursing facility and home health care but only if it is skilled care, medically necessary and for a limited period of time. But long-term care insurance covers custodial care. It may cover home health care, adult day care, nursing home care, the cost of an assisted living facility and respite care.

Before investing in this type of policy, consider your circumstances and seek free counseling from HICAP. Ask about the California Partnership for Long-Term Care insurance designed for low and middle-income Californians. To locate a local HICAP counselor, call the California Department of Aging. (See Resources.)

PLANNING

AHEAD

You can only stay in charge of your future affairs if you plan ahead. Tax laws allow you to build a retirement nest egg in special tax-deferred accounts. The law allows you to prepare written instructions regarding medical treatment in case you become incapacitated. It allows you to appoint someone to make decisions for you if it ever becomes necessary. It allows you to decide who will inherit your property someday. But the right to have your wishes carried out later is worthless unless you act now—while you still can.

How can I help ensure that my affairs will be handled my way if I become incapacitated?

You can take certain legal steps. A power of attorney is a written legal document that gives another person the right and authority to act on your behalf. (Prob. § 4022) That authority will end if you become incapacitated—unless you have a durable power of attorney. A durable power of attorney will remain in effect if you ever become incapacitated. (Prob. § 4124) This means that if you were suddenly unable to handle your own affairs, someone you trust—your legal agent or attorney-in-fact—could do so for you. Or you might choose to set up a springing power of attorney, which would only become effective at a specified future date or event, such as if you were to become incapacitated. (Prob. § 4030)

You can authorize your agent to simply pay your bills. This is usually a safer arrangement than adding someone else's name to your bank account. Or you can empower your agent to handle nearly all of your affairs. Your agent, however, cannot take anything of yours as a "gift" without your specific written authorization. (Prob. § 4128) These powers of attorney all expire when you die. (CC § 2357; Prob. § 4152) Make sure that you understand all of the terms before signing a power of attorney. Be absolutely certain that your chosen agent is both capable and trustworthy. Seniors have lost their life savings to unscrupulous agents—even to agents who are family members.

With an advance health care directive, you can designate someone to make medical decisions for you in the event that you become unable to do so for yourself. (Prob. §§ 4605, 4629, 4682) You could name an alternate agent as a backup. And you can include instructions regarding your future medical care, such as life-support treatment. Simply fill out the available printed form. It must be notarized or witnessed by two qualified individuals. (You can revoke the directive at any time, as long as you are still competent.) Give copies to your health care agent, alternate agent, doctor, health plan representatives and family. And if you are admitted to a hospital or nursing home, take a copy with you. Consider registering your directive with California's Secretary of State as well. By doing so, health care providers and other authorized individuals may be able to obtain information from your directive in an emergency if your agents or family members cannot be reached. (Prob. §§ 4800-4806) To obtain an advance health care directive kit (in English or Spanish) for $6, call the California Medical Association at 800-882-1262 (www.cmanet.org) or find one on the state Office of the Attorney General's website (www.oag.ca.gov).

You may also consider completing a Physician Orders for Life-Sustaining Treatment (POLST) form if you are terminally ill or in frail health. Signed by your physician, this new form (effective in 2009) allows you to give specific end-of-life treatment instructions regarding, for example, your pain management, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, feeding procedures and other medical interventions. It has the force of a physician's medical order and remains with the patient wherever he or she receives care. It does not, however, replace the traditional advance directive, which includes other instructions. (Prob. §§ 4780-4785) For more information, talk to your doctor or go to www.coalitionccc.org.

What is a living will?

The term "living will" is used to describe a legal document that states an individual does not want life-sustaining treatment if he or she is terminally ill or permanently unconscious. It should not be confused with a will or a living trust, which serve different purposes. In 2000, the advance health care directive became California's legally recognized format for a living will. It is more flexible than a traditional living will, allowing individuals to give various health care instructions in advance and appoint someone who will make his or her health care decisions if necessary.

The advance health care directive also replaced the durable power of attorney for health care (DPAHC). However, if you already executed a DPAHC and it has not expired, it would still be valid. Or, if you previously executed a Natural Death Act Declaration (California's old format for a living will), that, too, would still be valid. You do not need to replace it with the more comprehensive advance health care directive unless you choose to do so.

Can I be barred from handling my own affairs for any reason?

Yes. To consent to medical treatment or make a legal contract, for example, you must be able to understand the nature and consequences of your actions. The law refers to this as having sufficient capacity. (CC § 38; Prob. §§ 811-813) If you lose such capacity, the agent named in your durable power of attorney may step in on your behalf. If you haven't made such arrangements, the court may appoint a conservator.

What is a conservator?

A conservator is someone authorized by the court to manage your affairs. A conservator may be appointed if you become unable to make sound decisions, feed or dress yourself, handle your own finances or resist undue influence. (Prob. §§ 1800-1804) Conservators may be family members, friends or, in some cases, the county public guardian. But, unlike an agent with a durable power of attorney, a conservator will receive court supervision in the handling of your affairs. (Prob. § 1851.5) You should be aware that a conservatorship can be expensive. (If you receive SSI/SSP or certain other government benefits, you could qualify to have the court fee waived.)

You can nominate your own conservator in an advance health care directive for a judge's future consideration. (Prob. § 4672) Even after a petition for conservatorship has been filed, you can nominate your own conservator if you have sufficient capacity to do so. (Prob. § 1810) If someone seeks to have a conservator appointed for you, you must be notified and may oppose the conservatorship in a court hearing. (Prob. § 1828)

Do I need a will?

Yes. You need a will if you want any control over who will inherit your property. Even if you own very little, you can earmark a particular piece of jewelry or a cash gift for a person or charity of your choosing. You can nominate guardians for your young children. You can express your funeral and burial wishes. You may name an executor to carry out your wishes. The executor, who must be officially appointed as your personal representative by a judge, will collect and manage your assets, pay off debts and distribute your property. (Prob. §§ 58, 6101, 8400-8402, 8802, 9050)

Your will may be handwritten, or you can fill out a California Statutory Will. This may be useful if you have very few assets. (This form can be printed out from the State Bar website. Go to www.calbar.ca.gov, then Public Services and Making a Simple Will.)

However, your will must meet strict requirements to be valid, and it should be kept up-to-date. If you do decide to revise it, do not make your changes on the original. You can amend your will with a separate legal document referred to as a codicil. You may want to consult an attorney before creating or changing such an important document. (Prob. §§ 6110, 6111, 6221, 6226)

If you die without a will (referred to as intestacy), your property will go to your spouse, registered domestic partner, children or next of kin, according to California's intestate succession laws. (Prob. § 6401) If you don't have a spouse, domestic partner or child, or your next of kin cannot be located, your property will go to the state. (Prob. §§ 6800, 11900-11904)

SAVE FOR RETIREMENT

■ Consider depositing your earnings (up to $5,500 in 2013) into a tax-deferred Individual Retirement Account (IRA) up to age 70-1/2. If you are 50 or older, you can contribute $6,500 in 2013 or your taxable earnings for the year, whichever is less. (IRS Pub. 590)

■ Check out a non-traditional Roth IRA. If your annual adjusted gross income was between $112,000 and $127,000 in 2013 (between $178,000 and $183,000 for a married couple), you may qualify for such an account. Taxes are not deferred, but distributions will be tax-free. (RTC § 17507.6; IRS Pub. 590)

■ Find out if your employer offers a tax-deferred investment savings plan, such as a 401(k). In general, employees can set aside a portion of their earnings, up to $17,500 for 2013. As part of a "catch-up" plan, you can generally put away $6,000 more if you are 50 or older.

■ Ask about your company's pension plan. Most pension plans include a survivor's pension. Contact your pension plan administrator. For general information, call the Department of Labor's Employee Benefits Security Administration at 866-444-EBSA (444-3272) or visit www.dol.gov/ebsa (go to pension plans). Check the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. website (www.pbgc.gov).

How will my property be distributed after my death?

If you have a will, the executor named in your will starts the process by filing a petition in court and seeking appointment as your personal representative. Your personal representative will take charge of your assets, pay your debts and distribute the rest of your estate to your beneficiaries. This court process is known as probate. If you do not have a will, a relative or other interested person can start the process.

Simpler procedures are available for transferring property to a spouse or if the estate amounts to less than $150,000. (Prob. §§ 13100-13116, 13540-13545)

Does a will cover everything I own?

No. Generally a will does not control the distribution of life insurance proceeds, retirement plan assets, certain jointly owned assets, "transfer on death" or "pay on death" accounts and the assets of revocable living trusts. (Prob. §§ 5000 et seq) For more information on wills and estate planning, order free copies of the State Bar's consumer education pamphlets Do I Need a Will? and Do I Need Estate Planning? (See Resources.)

What is a revocable living trust?

It is a partial substitute for a will. With a living trust, your assets are put into the trust during your lifetime and transferred to your beneficiaries when you die. Most people name themselves as the trustee who manages the assets. This allows you to remain in control of the living trust assets during your lifetime. You also can revoke or change your living trust. One advantage of a living trust is that the assets do not go through probate, and the distribution process often takes less time. (Prob. §§ 15000 et seq)

A revocable living trust, however, does not remove all need for a will. Generally, you would still need a will—known as a pour-over will—to cover any assets that are not included in the trust.

Also, be aware that a living trust is not appropriate for everyone. Whether it is the best option for you will depend on your particular circumstances. Watch out for unqualified "advisers" who sell living trusts in "trust mill" scams and who seek to obtain seniors' private financial information for other purposes as well. (See Avoiding Consumer Scams.)

The free State Bar pamphlet Do I Need a Living Trust? can provide you with more detailed information (see Resources). And before creating such a trust, you should seek advice from a qualified estate planning attorney. (See Getting Legal Help.)

Will my beneficiaries' inheritance be taxed?

It depends on the circumstances. Property left to your spouse or a charity will not be subject to estate tax. The portion of the estate that is left to anyone else—even your children—will be taxed if your assets total more than $5.25 million in 2012. (IRS form 706, Pub. 950)

Under federal law, you could also give away as much as $14,000 in 2013—and $5.25 million during your lifetime—to each of your children or to anyone else without incurring gift tax. Actual amounts are subject to change. In addition, you could pay your grandchild's college tuition or medical insurance premiums (or anyone's tuition or medical bills, for that matter) free of gift tax—but only if the payments are made directly to the educational institution or medical provider. (IRS form 709) For information on estate tax and other gift tax exemptions, contact an estate planning attorney, or, call the IRS or state Controller's Office. (See Resources.)

Can I just leave my savings in a bank account for later use?

No, not for more than three years—unless you deposit or withdraw funds or contact the bank. If an account or safe deposit box sits dormant for that long without any activity, the funds or contents will be turned over to the state. (This would not apply if you have another active account at the same bank or financial institution.) Before transferring the funds, the bank must send a notice to your last known address. (CCP §§ 1510-1521) To reclaim such funds or property, go to www.claimit.ca.gov or contact the Bureau of Unclaimed Property in the State Controller's Office. (See Resources.) Some 7.5 million notices were sent out between January 2007 and March 2012 urging owners to reclaim their state-held valuables.

In 2010, Congress increased the insurance coverage at Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.-insured banks and savings institutions and federally insured credit unions to $250,000 per depositor. If you have more in savings, you might consider dividing it up among different types of accounts (putting some away in a payable-on-death account, for example, in which each beneficiary is insured up to $250,000) or splitting it up among various FDIC-insured institutions. For more detailed information and online guides, go to the FDIC website (www.fdic.gov). You can request free copies of FDIC pamphlets by calling 877-275-3342. To see if your bank or credit union accounts are insured, check FDIC's website or call 877-ASK-FDIC.

DEALING WITH

DEBT

Perhaps your debts have become unmanageable now that you are living on a fixed or more limited income. Maybe the unexpected costs of medical treatment or prescription drugs have pushed you to the brink, or maybe you're facing the foreclosure of your home in tough times. How you deal with the situation will depend on your particular circumstances.

What should I do if I am having trouble paying my bills?

You could contact your creditors and ask for more time to make payments. It might help to call a credit and debt counseling agency as well. Check with the California Department of Corporations to find out the agency is licensed by calling 800-275-2677 or contact the Better Business Bureau (www.bbb.org). If you wind up filing for bankruptcy, you will be required to get counseling from an agency approved by the U.S. Trustee Program. (See bankruptcy question on the next page.)

Be cautious about obtaining a debt consolidation loan to pay off your debts. If the interest is too high, you could wind up with an even bigger problem. If you do get a loan, make sure that the financial statements turned over to the lender are true and complete. For information on credit and loans, go to www.ftc.gov/credit or call 877-FTC-HELP.

What will happen if I simply don't pay my debts?

If you signed an agreement putting the property up for collateral—securing the debt—when you bought it, the creditor could repossess the item. But even in the case of unsecured purchases (purchases made with credit cards, for example) the creditor can obtain a court judgment in which property can be repossessed, your wages attached and your bank accounts seized. (CCP §§ 487.010-487.030, 706.050) In addition, if you own a home, a lien could be placed on your property for an unpaid debt. You may, however, be able to file a claim of exemption for your home. In addition, if you have very little income or assets, you may be judgment-proof, in which case your creditors may not take further legal action.

For more information on handling debt, get a free copy of the State Bar pamphlet What Can I Do if I Can't Pay My Debts? (See Resources.)

Should I file for bankruptcy if I cannot pay my debts?

It depends. If you have few assets and little or no income, bankruptcy may not be your best option. It will seriously damage your credit for 10 years and will not necessarily wipe out your debt. For seniors with greater assets and income, however, filing for bankruptcy might make sense if your creditors will not agree to an extended payment schedule. Seek an attorney's advice before making such a decision.

There are two types of personal bankruptcy: Chapter 13 and Chapter 7. In general, if you have a steady income, Chapter 13 allows you to stop most debt collection in exchange for a promise to pay your available funds to creditors as part of a three-to-five-year repayment plan. With a repayment plan, you may be able to keep certain property—such as your car or home—even if it was used to secure a loan. If you fulfill your obligation, most remaining debt would be canceled at the end of the repayment period.

Under Chapter 7, however, you ask the bankruptcy court to cancel most of your debts because you don't have enough money or property to pay them off. (To qualify for a Chapter 7 plan, you would have to meet specific criteria related to your income and future ability to pay.) Certain assets would be sold to help pay off your creditors. With this type of bankruptcy, you generally would not be able to keep property that was used as collateral for a loan.

Before filing for either type of bankruptcy, however, you will need to undergo credit counseling from a U.S. Trustee Office-approved agency. Before your bankruptcy case ends, you would have to complete personal financial management counseling as well. For lists of approved counselors, visit www.justice.gov/ust (go to Credit Counseling and Debtor Education).

Is there anything I can do to stop bill collectors from hounding me?

Yes. The law sets some boundaries for bill collectors. For example, with debts involving car loans, medical care or charge accounts, such collectors cannot contact you before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m. without your permission. Generally, they cannot contact you—or someone else—at work regarding the debt. Nor can they harass, threaten or mislead you with lies, and they must identify themselves when they call. In addition, bill collectors must include "debtors rights" information with their first written notice to the debtor. (CC §§ 1788 et seq., 1812.700) For information or to file a complaint, contact the Federal Trade Commission at 877-FTC-HELP or www.ftc.gov.

If I am receiving Social Security income, can my creditors get ahold of it?

No. In general, your Social Security income is protected from creditors. It may be even easier to protect such income if you have your checks deposited directly into your bank account. Social Security income can, however, be garnished for court-ordered child support, alimony or unpaid federal taxes.

Can I lose my home if I fall behind in my mortgage payments?

Yes. However, you may be able to work out a plan with the lender to lower payments or even suspend them temporarily. You may be able to refinance your home with an affordable, government-backed mortgage, and in light of the recent home mortgage crisis, other options may soon be available. But you must take action immediately. Do not ignore notices from your lender saying you are in default on your payments. The lender could foreclose and sell your home in just months. Under the new California Homeowner Bill of Rights, if you are eligible and have completed a loan modification, the foreclosure process must stop while the lender reviews your application. (CC § 2923.5) Call your mortgage company and contact HUD at 800-569-4287 for a referral to a free counseling agency that can help you find a solution. Call the Homeowner's Hope 24-hour hotline at 888-995-HOPE.

Be cautious in your search for help. Avoid falling victim to a loan modification scam. Recently, California has seen an explosion of such scams. It may start with a call or knock at the door and an offer to renegotiate your loan—for an upfront fee. You may be told to avoid contacting your lender. Then, while little or nothing is done to modify your loan, you unwittingly lose precious time and slip closer to foreclosure.

Foreclosure consultants and mortgage servicers are, by federal and state law, prohibited from collecting fees upfront and asking the homeowner to sign any wage assignment, real or personal property lien or power of attorney. (CC § 2920.5, 2944.7, 2945 et al) Look out for other foreclosure rescue scams. For example, you could wind up paying a high fee for a "forensic loan audit" to help prevent your foreclosure—and then receive no service at all.

Some seniors face foreclosure because a predatory lender has lured them into a home equity loan that they cannot possibly repay. The interest rate and fees may be much higher than those of a standard loan, may require a large "balloon" payment at some point or may be illegal. The lender may avoid explaining the loan's terms or offer misleading information (seeking, instead, to take advantage of the senior who could be facing a cash crunch). Seniors—who may have little income but greater equity in their homes than many younger homeowners—are primary targets in this type of scam. If you fall behind in your payments, take action immediately. For more guidance, go to www.foreclosureinfoca.org, www.hud.gov, www.995hope.org (888-995-HOPE) or www.oag.ca.gov. You can also contact the Federal Trade Commission at 877-FTC-HELP or www.ftc.gov, or the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. (See Resources.)

STAYING ON THE

JOB

In the face of soaring health care costs, a troubled economy and shrinking retirement plans, many seniors in recent years have migrated back to the workplace—or simply stayed on the job.

The number of workers between the age of 65 and 74 increased 30 percent between 1990 and 2010. Those aged 75 and older increased 39 percent. With America's baby boomers just entering their mid-60s, experts say, the trend is just beginning.

Can I be turned down for a job or a work training program because of my age?

No. An employer cannot fire you, deny you a job or discriminate against you simply because you are over 40 (the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act and California Fair Employment and Housing Act). Nor can an employer turn you down for a training program or educational benefit simply because you are over 40. (GC §§ 12920, 12940)

If you experience such discrimination, you can contact the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing or your local Equal Employment Opportunity Commission office. (See Resources.)

Mobile devices and driving: It is illegal to use cell phones and other mobile devices while driving unless it is set up for hands-free use or if you are making an emergency call (to law enforcement, for example). Nor can you use any mobile device to write, send or read text messages, except to select a name or phone number to make a call. (VC §§ 12810.3, 23123-23123.5)

Will I lose my Social Security benefits if I stay on the job or go back to work?

No, not if you have reached full retirement age—66 or 67, depending on your birthdate. If you do without Social Security benefits until age 70, you will receive a larger monthly benefit check, regardless of any additional earnings. However, if you collect Social Security payments before you reach full retirement age and earn additional income, your benefits will be reduced if your earnings exceed a certain amount.

For more information, you should contact your local Social Security Administration office.

GETTING

AROUND

Simply getting around, too, can be a challenge in your senior years. Studies show that seniors (age 65 and older) actually cause fewer auto accidents than the youngest drivers (ages 18 through 25). But if an accident occurs, the older driver is at much greater risk of serious injury or death. According to a Rand study, seniors are nearly seven times more likely than younger drivers to be killed in a two-car accident. While your age alone is not reason enough to limit or take away your driver's license, you can lose your driving rights based on traffic violations, failed written or driving tests, poor vision or various other medical conditions.

Are the driving requirements different for seniors?

No. But when you reach age 70, you can no longer renew your license by mail. (VC § 12814.5(c)) The Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) can request a doctor's approval. You may not receive a license if your corrected vision is 20/200 or worse in your best eye. (VC § 12805(b)) The DMV also can refuse to issue or renew your driver's license if you are an alcoholic or addicted to certain drugs, have had lapses of consciousness within the past three years or marked confusion or any physical or mental disorder that could affect the safety of your driving. (VC § 12806)

In addition, if a doctor diagnoses Alzheimer's disease or certain other conditions linked to lapses of consciousness, he or she is required to notify the local health office. In turn, the health office must contact the DMV. (HSC § 103900(b))

Can I be reported for unsafe driving?

Yes. Anyone can fill out a DMV Request for Driver Reexamination (Form DS 699) to flag an unsafe driver. Officials try to keep the reporter's name confidential. (VC §§ 1808.5)

Can the DMV simply limit my driving rights rather than revoke my license?

Yes. The DMV may, for safety reasons, issue a driver's license for a shorter period of time than the terms of a regular license. (VC § 12508) Or, depending on your ability, you may qualify for a restricted license that only permits you to drive during daylight hours, for example, or on city streets (not highways or freeways), or within 20 miles of your home.

Are there any refresher programs to help me improve my driving skills?

Mature driver education courses are available for drivers who are 55 years old or older. And senior drivers who complete such a course can get a discount on their car insurance for three years. (VC § 1675) For the location of a "Mature Driving Improvement Program" in your area, you could check with your local senior center or call 916-229-3127. For additional information geared for seniors, visit the DMV's website at www.dmv.ca.gov (click on the menu at the bottom "How do I ..." and choose Get Information for Seniors). There are also resources that can help you evaluate your own—or an elderly parent's—driving skills. See the DMV publication, "Senior Guide for Safe Driving," or visit the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety's website at www.aaafoundation.org/quizzes. Check out the resources at www.seniordrivers.org (such as AAA's "Roadwise Review") and learn a few warning signs for when to limit or stop driving.

What is a DMV medical information card?

It is an adhesive-backed card, available through the DMV, that can be attached to the back of your driver's license. The fill-in-the-blanks card can be used to identify your blood type, allergies, past or present medical problems, medications and information on how to reach your doctor and other contact person in an emergency. (VC § 12811.1)

Are there any special accommodations for me if I am disabled or unable to drive?

If a physician certifies you as disabled, you can qualify for a special parking placard. The placard allows you to park in specially marked, more accessible parking spaces. In addition, you do not have to pay the parking meter. (VC §§ 22511.5, 22511.55)

Cities may also adopt ordinances permitting individuals who are physically disabled or age 50 or older to travel on sidewalks via electric cart. A permit and identification sticker is required. (VC § 21114.5)

In addition, communities provide various means of assistance for those who cannot drive or use public transportation. Contact your county's Area Agency on Aging or a local senior center and ask about transportation services for seniors. Some communities provide free rides solely to seniors who are disabled, while others offer services to all seniors. In some communities, special vans make scheduled trips to grocery stores, shopping malls and senior centers. In others, taxi vouchers help seniors keep their doctor appointments.

If you are no longer able to drive, keep in mind that you will probably need another form of identification once your driver's license expires or is revoked. If you are 62 or older, the DMV will issue you a free senior citizen ID card that will be valid for 10 years and can be renewed. (VC §§ 13000-13008) If you cannot drive because of a physical or mental condition, you can exchange your valid driver's license for a DMV-issued ID card free of charge.

HANDLING

ELDER ABUSE

As many as one in seven seniors nationwide experiences elder abuse—usually at the hands of a family member. Some wind up bruised and battered, or dehydrated and neglected in their own beds. Others end up penniless, victims of a relative's greed. Some even lose their homes. Yet most elder abuse still goes unreported. Your caregiver may be stealing from you, beating you or simply leaving you stranded in your own room. You may be afraid of what will happen if you tell someone. But help is available. Turn your situation around before it gets worse.

What is elder abuse?

It is the neglect, exploitation or "painful or harmful" mistreatment of anyone who is 65 or older (or who falls under the legal definition of a "dependent" adult aged 18-64). It might be physical violence, psychological abuse, isolation or a caregiver's neglect. It could be identity theft (see Avoiding Consumer Scams), or the theft or embezzlement of a senior's property. (PC § 368; WIC §§ 15610.23, 15610.27)

In short, elder abuse involves various crimes, such as theft, that can strike younger victims as well. However, criminals face stiffer penalties when their victims are 65 years old or older.

Report of Elder Abuse

What should I do if I suspect someone is abusing or exploiting an elderly friend?

If you suspect abuse or exploitation is occurring in your friend's home, call your local Adult Protective Services (APS) agency. (Check your county phone listings or ask your Area Agency on Aging for the number.) Your report will be confidential and you can remain anonymous. If you suspect abuse in a licensed long-term care facility, such as an assisted living or nursing home, contact your local long-term care Ombudsman at 800-231-4024. (WIC §§ 9700 et seq., 15631) You can also contact local law enforcement. (WIC §15631)

To report elder abuse of any kind, call the state Office of the Attorney General's Bureau of Medi-Cal Fraud and Elder Abuse Hotline at 800-722-0432 or your local district attorney's office.

For more information, order a complimentary copy of the State Bar pamphlet What Should I Know About Elder Abuse? (see Resources). You could also order A Citizen's Guide to Preventing & Reporting Elder Abuse, produced by the state Attorney General's office. For a free copy of this guide, write to: The Office of the Attorney General, 1425 River Park Dr., Suite 300, Sacramento, CA 95815. Visit www.oag.ca.gov for an online version (go to Publications and Elder Abuse).

Am I required to report suspected elder abuse?

Yes, if you are responsible—with or without pay—for taking care of an elder or dependent adult. Other mandated reporters include: administrators, supervisors and licensed staff of facilities providing care and services to the elderly; Adult Protective Services employees; physicians; police officers; and clergymen. If a mandated reporter fails to report suspected abuse, he or she could be charged with a misdemeanor. (WIC § 15630) In addition, financial institution employees must report any suspected financial abuse of elders as well—or risk facing civil penalties.

Is there anyone who will check on my elderly father's well-being for me?

Yes. If you are worried about a parent or elderly loved one who lives in another community, you can contact the local law enforcement agency in his or her community and request a well-being check.

EXAMPLES OF ABUSE

- Your caregiver or a "new friend" pressures you to sign a power of attorney so that he can handle your affairs for you—and then sells your home for the cash.
- Malnourished and covered with bedsores, you lie stranded in your own bedroom while your live-in son is busy emptying your bank accounts.
- A home repairman persuades you to pay cash on the spot for a "great" home improvement deal—and then fails to do any work.
- You forget to take your medication and a nursing home staff member slaps you in the face.

What will happen if someone finds out that my grown child is hurting me?

It depends on the abuse. But if you are being mistreated in any way, you need help, and your child needs help as well. Call your local Adult Protective Services office and explain your situation. An APS social worker can meet with you privately and help ensure that you are safe. (WIC § 15762)

Is domestic violence the same as elder abuse?

No, and different laws apply to each as well. The law defines domestic violence as certain kinds of abuse directed toward a spouse or former spouse, domestic partner or former domestic partner, cohabitant or person of any age with whom the abuser has had a "dating or engagement relationship," has had a child or is related by blood or marriage. (FC §§ 6200 et seq.; PC § 13700(b)) Such violence is behavior driven by a need to control. It can range from threats to unwanted sexual touching and hitting, and it cuts across all cultures, ethnic backgrounds, education levels and income brackets. If a victim of domestic violence is age 65 or older, however, the case may be handled as elder abuse.

What can I do to protect myself from an abusive caregiver or spouse?

If you are in immediate danger, call 911. When the police arrive, explain what happened. In both elder abuse and domestic violence cases, the officers can contact an on-call judicial officer and issue you an Emergency Protective Order (also called an EPO) immediately. This legally prohibits the abuser from coming near you. Emergency orders can also apply to any other named members of the household.) The EPO will remain in effect for five court days or seven calendar days. You could also seek a Temporary Restraining Order (called a TRO). Just fill out the forms at your local court. A TRO goes into effect when it is signed by a judge and delivered to the abuser. It may be made "permanent," which means it will be good for up to five years and can be renewed. (WIC § 15657.03; FC § 6250(d); CCP § 527)

Although a restraining order may help protect you, it does not eliminate the risk of future violence.

Restraining orders also may be obtained in elder abuse cases in which a senior has suffered physically or mentally from financial abuse or neglect.

In cases of domestic violence, state law allows victims to keep their addresses confidential through the state's Safe at Home program. This means that your home address need not appear on court papers or other official documents. For more information, call 877-322-5227. And to locate a local shelter or counseling, call the National Domestic Violence 24-hour hotline at 800-799-7233 (800-787-3224 for TTY). Another resource is the State Bar pamphlet Can the Law Help Protect Me from Domestic Violence? (To order a copy, see Resources for contact information.)

AVOIDING

CONSUMER

SCAMS

Americans lose tens of billions a year in telemarketing fraud and in Internet scams. The victims are often seniors, who are often approached through mail, telephone, e-mail or at their front door. Know your rights and how you might be vulnerable. As the old adage goes: If it seems too good to be true, it probably is.

■ Charitable donation or health care scams: Watch out for fake charities or people who say they need to verify personal information over the phone. Anyone soliciting funds for charitable purposes must register with the state Attorney General's office. (BPC § 17510.85; GC § 12599) To find out if a charity is registered, call the Attorney General's office (see Resources) or visit the website (www.oag.ca.gov/charities). Also check with your local Better Business Bureau (www.bbb.org).

■ Door-to-door solicitation: Ask to see a business permit. (Most cities require one.) Resist pressure to buy anything on the spot. If you do make a purchase, remember that you usually have three business days to legally cancel such a contract if it was made in your home or in a temporary business place, such as a convention center, restaurant or hotel. (CC § 1689.6(a)) Contact the Better Business Bureau to check out the business. To report a fraud, call the police or county district attorney's office.

■ Financial advisors and investment scams: Beware of investment seminars touting get-rich-quick schemes. Check out the "investment" before investing. Call the state Department of Corporations' toll-free hotline at 866-ASK-CORP (275-2677). For further information on protecting yourself, check out the Department of Corporations' "Seniors Against Investment Fraud" (SAIF) program. For a few SAIF tips, see Avoid Investment Scams in the next column.

■ Funeral and cemetery fraud: Watch out for high-priced sales pitches. The Consumer Guide to Funeral and Cemetery Purchases—available at no cost from the Department of Consumer Affairs' Cemetery and Funeral Bureau—details your requirements, pre-needs arrangements and what to look for in a contract. To verify a funeral establishment's license or to file a complaint, call the Cemetery and Funeral Bureau at 916-574-7870 or go to www.cfb.ca.gov. Check with your local Better Business Bureau as well.

■ Home repair/home improvement: It may sound like a good deal. A repairman will fix your roof with "leftover" materials from another job. You pay cash—and he does a shoddy job or nothing at all. Or a plumber fixes your clogged toilet and presents you with a $10,000 bill. Before hiring a contractor, get several estimates, check references and put everything in writing. Be aware that your home cannot be used as collateral in a home improvement contract if you are 65 or older. (BPC § 7159.2; CC § 1804.1(j)) Contact the Contractors State License Board (see Resources) to check the contractor's license and any past complaints. Such contractors must be licensed. Never pay more than the maximum allowed by law (usually 10 percent of the repair price or $1,000, whichever is less) before the work is done. For additional tips, contact the licensing board for a copy of What You Should Know Before You Hire a Contractor (also available online).

■ Medicare fraud: Never give your Medicare number to a stranger. Always check your Medicare statement to verify that you actually received the services charged to Medicare. If you suspect provider fraud, call Medicare. And to report suspected Medi-Cal provider fraud, call the Bureau of Medi-Cal Fraud and Elder Abuse in the state Office of the Attorney General. (See Resources.)

■ Living trust mills: Beware of "trust mill" marketing schemes in which salespeople pose as specialists in estate planning to gain your trust and confidence. These unqualified "experts" seek to obtain your personal financial information with the ulterior motive of selling you both a living trust and an annuity, which may not be appropriate for you. Such tactics may violate California insurance laws and laws prohibiting the unauthorized practice of law. To report a scam, call your local district attorney's office or the California Department of Insurance. (See Resources.)

■ Telemarketing/mail/Internet fraud: It can be difficult to distinguish legitimate telemarketers and e-mail solicitations from those that are fraudulent. Never provide personal information or send money to solicitors who contact you first. Hang up or insist on calling the individual back after you check out the solicitation. Steer clear of any caller or mailer announcing that you have won a sweepstakes or foreign lottery and simply need to pay a "fee" or "tax" to collect your winnings. (The cross-border sale or purchase of lottery tickets is illegal—and so is any advance charge for collecting the prize.) For information on filing a complaint, contact the state Attorney General's office (www.oag.ca.gov/contact/). To file a complaint about Internet fraud, go to www.ic3.gov.

Many other kinds of scams and schemes hurt seniors as well. Be on the lookout for credit repair/credit card insurance scams, real estate predatory lending (see Dealing with Debt), annuity fraud, and STOLI or SPINLIFE life insurance schemes (for information on these schemes, go to www.insurance.ca.gov and click on the Senior Information Center).

AVOID INVESTMENT SCAMS

Don't invest until you investigate. Call the Department of Corporations' toll-free number at 866-ASK-CORP (275-2677) before purchasing any type of financial product.

Don't invest right away: Slow down and take your time. Most fraud occurs because the con artist talks the victim into making a "rushed" decision.

Don't be too trusting. Remember, appearances can be deceiving.

Don't invest more than you can afford to lose. How much are you willing to lose if the investment turns out to be a scam? If you lose everything you have, what will you do?

Don't believe "guaranteed" large rates of return on your investment. There are always risks to investing.

Don't invest until you complete the "four C's": Consider your options. Compare the offer to others. Consult with someone you trust. Call the Department of Corporations' toll-free number listed above.

www.com.

How can I avoid being solicited by telemarketers and marketing mail?

You can register your telephone numbers (including your cell phone number) with the National Do-Not-Call Registry, which is managed by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). To register, call 888-382-1222 or go to the website (www.donotcall.gov). You can also ask telemarketers to put you on their "do not call" lists. If they keep calling you, report them to the FTC. (See Resources.)

In addition, tell businesses not to sell your name to other companies. To remove your name from mailing lists, go to www.dmchoice.org and register online or download a form request and mail it to: Direct Marketing Association Inc. at: DMA Choice, DMA, Box 643, Carmel, NY 10512. To remove your e-mail address from marketing lists, go to dmchoice.org and click on Register for eMPS. You can also "opt out" of the credit agencies' pre-approved credit offer mailing lists. Simply call 888-5-OPTOUT (567-8688) or opt out online at www.optoutprescreen.com.

Check out those "senior specialists"

Be wary of those who tout themselves as specialists offering insurance and financial advice to seniors. Some simply use senior-related titles and designations to pose as experts. They may not have had any relevant training or experience at all. That fancy title may just be a marketing ploy to get your business.

Insurance brokers and agents are prohibited from using a "senior designation" to mislead consumers.

They can no longer use any senior-related certification, credential or professional designation unless it meets certain criteria and has been approved by the California Insurance Commissioner. (IC § 787.1) To check on a senior designation, call the Department of Insurance's licensing division at 800-967-9331. If you have questions about an insurance offer, scheme or agent, call 800-927-HELP (4357).

Broker-dealers and investment advisers (and their agents and representatives) are prohibited from using any "senior specific" certification, credential or professional designation that could be misleading. (Corp. § 25243.5) For more information on "senior" specialists and advisors, go to www.sec.gov (click on For Seniors).

What is identity theft?

Identity theft is the unauthorized use of someone's personal data (a driver's license or Social Security number, for example) for any unlawful purpose, such as to obtain credit cards, loans or services. (PC § 530.5) It is a fast-growing crime that struck about 11 million Americans in 2011 and costs businesses, financial institutions and consumers billions of dollars annually.

Identity thieves may rummage through your trash, steal your wallet or skim encoded data from your credit card. They might go phishing (this refers to the use of misleading e-mails and fraudulent websites to trick Internet users into revealing personal data). Or they might plant spyware—software that collects personal information as it is keyed into your computer.

To keep tabs on your credit, request a free credit report annually from each of the three major credit bureaus. (See Resources.) To order your free annual reports, call 877-322-8228 or visit the program's website at www.annualcreditreport.com.

If you fall victim to identity theft, take action immediately (see Protect Your Identity on p.12). For more information, visit the FTC website (www.ftc.gov/idtheft), the Privacy older and has not applied for benefits, you can still receive benefits on his record as long as you are at least 62 as well. You must, however, be divorced and single for at least two years before seeking such benefits.

Rights Clearinghouse (www.privacyrights.org), California's Office of Privacy Protection (www.privacy.ca.gov), the Identity Theft Resource Center (idtheftcenter.org) and the California Attorney General's office (www.oag.ca.gov/idtheft).

Will I continue to receive Social Security benefits as a widow (or widower) if I remarry?

Yes, if you are at least 60 when you remarry. A widow or widower isn't actually eligible for benefits until age 60 or, if disabled, until 50. You could apply to receive benefits based on your new spouse's work record instead if those benefits would be higher. If you remarry before turning 60, however, you will be ineligible for widow's benefits throughout your marriage. For more information, call Social Security.

Do I need to change my will in order to remove my ex-spouse or former partner as a beneficiary?

Unless your will states otherwise, your divorce or termination of your domestic partnership automatically revokes any provisions naming your ex-spouse or partner as a beneficiary or as an executor, trustee, conservator or guardian. (Prob. §§ 6122, 6122.1) You would, however, have to change the beneficiary designations for your life insurance and individual retirement accounts.

Will I pay higher taxes if I remarry?

Maybe. The so-called marriage penalty has been on the decline since 2005 for those in the lower-income tax brackets. At higher taxable income levels, however, getting married may increase your tax bill. (IRS Publication 505)

RAISING YOUR

GRANDCHILDREN

Some 7 million children under 18 in this country live under a grandparent's care. Drug addiction, family violence, abandonment, poverty and other reasons may be to blame. But in raising your grandchildren, simply opening your home to them may not be enough. Taking responsibility for a child can involve complicated legal options, requirements and rights.

Do I have any rights if my grandchild winds up in the foster care system?

Yes. The county social worker and court must give you (or any aunt, uncle or sibling) preferential consideration when deciding where to place the child. You and your home must meet certain standards, but, as a grandparent, you would not need a license. Also, a judge could authorize you to make decisions regarding the child's medical care and education, and you might be eligible for foster care payments, depending on certain criteria. In some counties, families in your situation can also get support services such as respite, legal assistance, mentoring and transportation, as well as tutoring and recreational activities for the child, through the state's Kinship Support Services Program (KSSP). For more information, go to www.dss.cahwnet.gov (click on Find Services and Foster Care, then Kinship Care).

Should I seek guardianship of my grandchildren if I am raising them?

It depends on the situation. If it appears that the children will remain in your care, you may want to consider becoming their legal guardian. This does not terminate the parents' parental rights and obligations, but it does give you legal custody. This means that you would have the legal right to make many decisions regarding their education and care.

If, however, the parents are only temporarily unable to care for the children, it may be sufficient to simply fill out a Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit. (FC § 6550) This would allow you to get them into school and authorize school-related medical care.

How do I become a guardian?

You can file a petition in court for appointment as guardian, or the

How do I keep my Social Security number confidential?

PROTECT YOUR IDENTITY

If you are a victim of identity theft:

- Call the credit agencies listed in Resources (page 15), put a fraud alert on your credit report and request a free credit report. (CC §§ 1785.11.1)
- File a police report.
- File a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and obtain an FTC ID Theft Affidavit. (See Resources.)
- Fill out the ID Theft Affidavit and send it by certified mail (with a copy of the police report) to all businesses where a new account was opened.
- Call the Attorney General's ID Theft Hotline (888-880-0240) only if: you have filed a police report and are facing criminal charges or a criminal record stemming from the theft of your identity or are seeking to sue a creditor to establish yourself as an identity theft victim.

- If your mail is stolen, contact the U.S. Post Office. If your Social Security card is lost or stolen, call the Social Security fraud hotline. (See Resources.) If your driver's license is stolen, call the local DMV (or call the DMV fraud control hotline at 866-658-5758).

It may be difficult. Increasingly, however, the law is providing you with added protection. For example, state law prohibits any business or individual—with the exception of a state or local government agency—from publicly displaying your Social Security number. Nor can your number be printed on any card required to access products or services. Your health care provider can no longer print your Social Security number on your identification card, and you cannot be required to transmit your number over the Internet unless the connection is "secure" or "encrypted." (CC §§ 1798.85 et seq) For more information, call the Department of Consumer Affairs' Office of Privacy Protection. (See Resources.)

What should I do if someone steals my credit card?

Notify the credit card company immediately. If someone runs up your credit card or uses your debit card without authorization, you are only liable for up to $50 if you promptly contact the company. (CC §§ 1747.10, 1748.31) It is also important to file a police report to document the loss and your response.

What should I do if I receive mail-order merchandise that I never ordered?

If you did not order it, it is considered an unconditional gift and you do not have to pay for it or return it. (CC § 1584.5)

GETTING

DIVORCED OR

REMARIED

Seniors own the bulk of the state's wealth in savings, home equity and other property. At this point in your life, you may have more at stake when you change your marital status. Or, you may be a widow living on Social Security income alone. If you choose to remarry, be aware of your decision's potential impact on your finances.

If I get divorced, can I still get Social Security benefits on my husband's work record?

Yes, if your ex-husband is receiving benefits or is deceased. However, you must have been married for at least 10 years and you must remain single. In addition, if your ex-husband is 62 years old or child, if he or she is at least 12, can file the petition. (Prob. § 1510) A court-ordered, confidential investigation will take place. The judge may place the child in your custody if he or she finds that it would be in the child's "best interests." (Prob. § 1514) However, if either parent objects to the guardianship, the judge will not appoint you guardian unless he or she finds that granting custody to the parent would be "detrimental" to the child and that the guardianship would be in the child's best interests. (FC § 3041)

Is there any financial assistance available for my grandchildren?

Yes. If you are caring for a grandchild or other young relative, you may apply for CalWORKs benefits for yourself and the child if you meet certain eligibility requirements. (WIC §§ 11200 et seq) If you seek benefits for the child alone—not yourself—your employment status will have no bearing on the child's eligibility and there is no maximum time allowance for receiving such benefits. You may even be eligible for foster care payments. Contact your local social services office for more information.

If your grandchild has been living with you as a ward or dependent of the court and you become that child's legal guardian, you may qualify for the Kinship Guardianship Assistance Payment (Kin-GAP) Program. Under this program, if you meet certain criteria, you may receive monthly payments at the basic foster care rate. (WIC §§ 11360-11369)

Do I have any right to visit my grandchildren?

Again, it depends on the situation. If either parent has died, for example, the child's siblings, aunts and uncles, and grandparents may be granted reasonable visitation if it is, as the judge sees it, in the child's best interests. (FC § 3102)

A grandparent may also be granted visitation if the child's parents are divorced or legally separated. (FC § 3103)

A grandparent may not, however, file a petition for visitation if the child's parents are married unless: the parents are separated, one has disappeared for at least a month, one parent joins in the grandparent's petition or the child is not living with either parent. (FC § 3104)

How do I find help for my elderly mother who wants to continue living in her own home?

First, assess your mother's particular needs. (See Hiring Help in the Home below.) She may qualify for In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS) if she has limited resources. IHSS is a Medi-Cal program that pays for in-home assistance when it is necessary to ensure the elder person's safety. (WIC § 12301.05) To locate IHSS, call your local Area Agency on Aging.

If she does not qualify for IHSS and just needs help with daily tasks, you could hire a caregiver through a home care agency or home care referral company. You could hire someone on your own, but if you are the caregiver's direct employer, you are responsible for paying employment taxes and workers' compensation.

But whether you hire someone through an agency or on your own, be extremely cautious, seek referrals and ask a lot of questions. Such caregivers are not regulated. In fact, many agencies do not check criminal backgrounds nor require prior training or experience.

Caregivers who provide medical care, however, must be licensed or certified. You can hire such caregivers through a licensed home health care agency. Home health care agencies, certified home health aides, certified nurse assistants, registered nurses, nurse practitioners and licensed vocational nurses all must be licensed or certified by the state. The Department of Public Health can verify a caregiver's license or certificate or refer you to the appropriate agency. (See Resources.)

Will Medicare cover the costs of a caregiver?

It depends. If a doctor prescribes medically necessary home health care for a homebound senior, Medicare will cover some of the costs. (You must use a Medicare-approved home health agency.) Medicare will not, however, pay for a caregiver who provides non-medical assistance. This is one reason why some seniors and their loved ones invest in long-term care insurance. (See Obtaining Health Care and Benefits.)

What other assistance is available for those who are elderly and homebound?

You can get hot meals delivered to your home through Meals on Wheels. To give caregivers a break, respite care is available. Check into Adult Day Care Centers and Adult Day Care Health Centers (ADHC). In addition, community care facilities may fill unused beds on a short-term basis to provide respite care for seniors who need 24-hour supervision. (HSC § 1505.5)

Where can I find information on nursing homes?

Contact your local long-term care Ombudsman. Go online to www.medicare.gov/nursinghomecompare, which rates some 15,000 Medicare and/or Medicaid-certified nursing homes based on health inspection results, quality measures and staffing levels. A Medicare guide on choosing a nursing home is also available online.

To verify the license of a nursing home or other licensed long-term care facility or to find out if any serious violations have occurred at a particular facility, call the Department of Public Health's licensing and certification unit at 800-236-9747.

FINDING A CAREGIVER OR NURSING HOME

Studies suggest that Americans age 65 and older are less likely to be chronically disabled or living in a nursing home today than seniors of the same age were two decades ago. Still, there may come a time when you can no longer manage on your own. You may simply need help with daily grooming, bathing, preparing meals—or just getting around. You may need round-the-clock care in a nursing home. There are options available.

HIRING HELP IN THE HOME

Assess your needs. Do you simply need help with such daily activities as bathing and preparing meals, or do you need medical or skilled nursing care as well? How much can you afford to pay?

Ask a lot of questions. Does the agency screen and train caregivers? Do caregivers undergo a criminal background check? (A certified home health aide, for example, must pass such scrutiny and cannot have certain convictions.) Does the agency handle taxes and insurance? Are the agency and worker bonded? Will Medicare, Medi-Cal or your private insurance cover any costs?

Find out your responsibilities. What taxes will you have to pay if you hire the worker on your own? See the Employment Development Department publication Household Employer's Guide. To obtain a copy, call 888-745-3886 or go to www.edd.ca.gov (click on Forms & Publications — DE 8829).

Seek referrals from a trustworthy source. Avoid using a "help wanted" ad to hire a caregiver. You do not know the background—or motives—of those who respond. Be wary of individual caregiver ads seeking employment. For lists of home care agencies and home health care agencies, contact your local Area Agency on Aging.

Consider taking some additional precautions if you do hire someone. It might be wise, for example, to move your valuables to another location for safekeeping—or at least lock them up. Seniors have lost many precious belongings to dishonest caregivers.

Will Medicare pay some of my mother's nursing home expenses?

Possibly, but not for longer than 100 days and only if your mother requires skilled care. In addition, Medicare would only cover part of the costs. After the first 20 days, your mother would have to make a co-payment of $148 a day. If she qualifies for Medi-Cal, however, more assistance may be available. Generally, Medi-Cal covers longer stays in a nursing home. For more information, you could contact Medicare or your local HICAP advisor. (See Resources.)

If my elderly mother gives away her assets, will Medi-Cal pay for a nursing home?

Your mother should obtain legal advice before giving away any assets. In determining eligibility, Medi-Cal reviews each individual's past finances to see what, if any, assets have been given away or transferred for less than fair market value. In 2013 reviewers will look back over a 30-month period, and may begin looking back over 60 months. The regulations will then penalize all asset transfers (unless it would cause a substantial hardship). Until the state adopts the new regulations, however, transfers made within the past 30 months may or may not cause periods of ineligibility. If your mother has very few assets, she may already qualify for at least partial coverage. Check with your county welfare department or an elder law attorney to learn more about meeting Medi-Cal's eligibility requirements.

Is there any assistance available if I take time off work to care for my ailing mother?

Yes, possibly. California's Paid Family Leave Program—a State Disability Insurance (SDI) Program—insurance may provide you with up to six weeks of pay if you take time off work to care for a seriously ill child, spouse, parent or domestic partner, or to bond with a new child. (UIC § 3301(a)) For more information, call the California Employment Development Department's Paid Family Leave Program at 877-BE-THERE (238-4373) or go to the Paid Family Leave Collaborative's website at www.paidfamilyleave.org.

The law also allows workers, if they meet certain criteria, to take a leave of absence for up to 12 weeks during a 12-month period if a parent, spouse or child is undergoing treatment in a hospital, hospice or other health care facility. (Family and Medical Leave Act, California Family Rights Act, GC § 12945.2; UIC § 3300(d))

Am I legally required to support my penniless, bedridden father?

Maybe. If you have been taking care of him—or have promised to take care of him—you are legally required to continue giving your best effort. You cannot just leave him helpless in his home. (FC §§ 4400, 4401; PC § 270c) If you do fall short, your father or the county (on his behalf) can seek such support from you. (FC § 4404) If, however, your father abandoned you for at least two years when you were a child, you may not be required to care for him now. Nor would you be liable for supporting him if he is receiving certain governmental aid. (WIC § 12350)

What is hospice care?

Hospice care is a program—usually a mix of physical, emotional, spiritual and practical care—for the terminally ill. It may take place in a patient's home or in a specially designed facility. A doctor's sign-off is required for participation. Payment is often on a sliding scale based on income. Medicare covers hospice care as does Medi-Cal and other insurance programs.

LOSING A SPOUSE OR PARENT

You may be overwhelmed with grief right now. You may want to leave the administrative matters for a later day. But there are notifications and legal steps that should not be postponed.

- Make funeral and burial arrangements.
- Obtain several copies of the death certificate.
- Gather relevant documents, such as the will, insurance policies, trusts, and stock, bank account and annuity statements.
- Contact the Social Security Administration (if the deceased was an eligible recipient).
- Send a notification and death certificate to the director of public health (if the deceased was a Medi-Cal recipient) within 90 days after the death.
- Notify any life insurance companies of the death.
- Contact the trustee of any trust and/or the attorney who prepared it.
- Contact the executor of the will and/or the attorney who prepared it.
- Call the administrator of the decedent's pension plan.
- Notify the decedent's banks and financial institutions.
- Contact credit card companies.
- Be sure that insurance or Medicare claims have been processed before paying any medical bills.

GETTING LEGAL HELP

Every county has free legal services for seniors under the federal Older Americans Act. The programs differ, however, and their criteria for accepting cases vary as well. These programs typically assist those in the greatest need, such as seniors facing eviction or the loss of public benefits.

If your county's legal services program cannot assist you, ask a friend, co-worker or business associate to recommend a lawyer, or call a State Bar-certified lawyer referral service. For an online list of certified referral services, go to the State Bar's website at www.calbar.ca.gov/lrs or call 866-44-CA-LAW (442-2529) for a recorded message with the phone numbers of certified services in your county. Out-of-state callers can call 415-538-2250 to hear the same message. Also check the Yellow Pages of a telephone directory for a listing.

The State Bar also certifies "specialists" in 11 legal areas. For lists of specialists, go to www.californiaspecialist.org. Keep in mind, however, that there are experienced attorneys who do not seek such certification. For more information on finding an attorney, order a free copy of the State Bar pamphlet How Can I Find and Hire the Right Lawyer? (See Resources.)

If you are a California resident age 60 or older, you may get free legal advice by calling the Senior Legal Hotline (see Resources). If you have a legal problem, it is best to consult a qualified attorney. But if you cannot afford to hire a lawyer, there are other resources. You could, for example, seek guidance from your county law librarian. Law librarians cannot give legal advice, but they can direct you to the appropriate resources and legal forms for your matter. You will also find useful information on many legal topics on California's legal services website (lawhelpca.org) and the California Courts' self-help web page (www.courts.ca.gov).

For additional copies of "Seniors and the Law," please e-mail your request, including your name, mailing address, phone number and number of copies desired, to: seniors@calbar.ca.gov or mail your request to: Seniors and the Law, Office of Media and Information Services, The State Bar of California, 180 Howard St., San Francisco, CA 94105-1639.

We extend a special thanks to attorney Helen Karr, whose commitment and painstaking research were crucial to the development of this guide. We also greatly appreciate the volunteer assistance of the State Bar's Committee on the Delivery of Legal Services (Legal Assistance for Seniors staff members Millie Gee, Katharine Hsiao, Esther Milbury, Jessica Soske, Robin Yamate, Naomi Young, CAPI Advocate Marianna Aue and HICAP Program Manager Janet VanDeusen and National Senior Citizen's Law Center attorney Jeanne Finberg); the bar's Committee on Senior Lawyers (Walton Phillips); the bar's Trusts and Estates Section (May Lee Tong, Carmen Alberio and Peter S. Stern); and the Housing and Economic Rights Advocates (Maeve Elise Brown). We thank attorneys Joan Virginia Allen and Fred Alan Jones for their input as well. The guide was illustrated by Don Asmussen.

SENIORS & THE LAW

The California Bar Foundation Bar is proud to partner with the State Bar of California to educate seniors about their rights and the legal challenges they may face. Seniors & The Law: A Guide for Maturing Californians provides valuable information about the laws, benefits, and services available to seniors. We invite you to share this guide with seniors, their adult children and caregivers, community organizations and others who serve the elderly as a helpful resource.

The Foundation is the Center of Philanthropy for California's Legal Community. We champion full and equal access to the law, invest in the next generation of California's lawyers, educate citizens about their rights and responsibilities while promoting philanthropic giving throughout the legal community.

Support Seniors & The Law and its sister education guides, Kids and the Law: An A-to-Z Guide for Parents and When You Become 18: A Survival Guide for Teenagers, as well as other Foundation programs, by making a tax-deductible contribution to the Foundation.

Warmest regards,

Frederick Brown, President
California Bar Foundation
